Teresa Moore's Bio:

Teresa Moore joined the Rinker Danzig law firm in May 2014 as Counsel, bringing extensive experience in the field of education law to the Firm's School Law group. In addition to training teachers, administrators, and other school leaders on issues such as tenure, special education, employment discrimination, employee whistleblowing claims, student harassment and anti-bullying law, ethics, governance, and student rights, Teresa has argued before the New Jersey Supreme Court, has substantial experience in federal and state courts, and has tried numerous disputes to conclusion in the New Jersey Office of Administrative Law.

Prior to joining the firm, Teresa co-created and acted as counsel to LEGAL ONE, a partnership between Rutgers University and the Foundation for Educational Administration. In that capacity, she developed education law courses for K-12 school leaders and presented them throughout New Jersey. Teresa also consulted with the Institute on Education Law and Policy (IELP) at Rutgers University-Newark, and taught education law as an adjunct professor at Rutgers Law School-Newark and Rutgers School of Public Affairs and Administration. At IELP, she researched and wrote publications including "Governance and Urban School Improvement: Lessons for New Jersey from Nine Cities;" "Shared Services in School Districts: Policies, Practices and Recommendations;" and "Guide to the New Jersey Quality Single Accountability Continuum." She has also appeared as a commentator on NJTV for the law and justice series "Due Process." Teresa presented a radio blog program on June 23, 2015 on the topic of "Transgender Issues in Public Schools for Students and Staff."
